

Headaches

A headache is a symptom and its causes are many and frequently unknown. Severe headaches of recent onset may be due to significant disease such as intracranial tumor and severe hypertension.

Migraine headaches were once considered to be vascular headaches but the cause is unknown. They are commonly one-sided in nature and the following symptoms can accompany a migraine headache:

- ⇒ Nausea
- ⇒ Vomiting
- ⇒ Temporary neurological symptoms such as visual disturbances, temporary paralysis, speech loss, etc. Some of these symptoms may be difficult to distinguish from a small stroke.

Cluster headaches are periodic, one-sided headaches that are severe and occur suddenly. The eye, temporal region and face are involved and they often occur two or three times each night over a period of weeks. After the cluster of headaches have stopped, the person may be symptom-free for weeks or months.
